■ rational LOFT

The most beautiful thing about a loft is its large high rooms and the feeling of freedom that they convey. The main focus is always on the oversized open-plan living, cooking and dining area. Here, the extravagant cooking island appears ready to for the stage. The high-quality "Laurent" ceramic is used not only for the worktop but also for the fronts. The Dekton surface by Cosentino is made of 100% natural materials and is extremely resistant.

The work and sink area can be cleverly hidden behind functional pocket folding doors, promoting an all-round homely ambience. The fronts in cashmere grey soft lacquer, a slightly reddish grey shade, harmonise perfectly with the reproduction in rustic dark brown oak.

The kitchen is conveniently accessible, as the pocket doors open with a light tap and then disappear completely. To close, all you need to do is press briefly on the door, which is then ejected and with a further press, the kitchen is invisible again.

The rational dressing room

In this walk-in wardrobe, the motto "rational - much more than a kitchen" is perfectly demonstrated.

The kitchen furniture is no longer identifiable as such; effecto glass cabinets, for example, are converted into wardrobes.

As a trendy innovation, the back panels of the tall cabinets feature the natural material organoid lavender. The use of untreated natural plant parts brings nature into the interiors and the lavender back panels not only exude a pleasant smell but also keep moths away.
